

A safe airport could save your life

Not so long ago I was involved in an accident and Life Flight took me to Seattle. When I was released to return home a local pilot picked me up at the airport and flew me home. It would have been very hard to ride the bus and without the airplanes oxygen, I don't know how I could have made it. When I tried to pay for the fuel it was made clear that no money would be accepted. The plan that moves the runway 400 feet to the East is by far the best option. This option requires no local taxpayer money meets the FAA safety standards and gives the county a great supply of gravel. We should have a good safe airport for vital transportation and fire fighting. If you are out of work it might be nice to have a job building a runway at the airport.
